ALERT. EnviroMission employment scam

Dear Shareholder,

It has come to the attention of EnviroMission Limited ("The Company") that an individual ("scammer") is engaging in malicious solicitations for non-existent job opportunities ("scam") within the EnviroMission organisation.

Relatedly, the company wishes to make it clear that EnviroMission is not currently soliciting any employment opportunities (operational or otherwise) at this time.

The matter has been referred to the IC3 division at the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) and the company is awaiting guidance on a potential remedy.

The modus operandi of the scam is to:

- Advertise the job opportunity via various digital employment channels.
- Entice the applicant to participate in a 'call only' Skype interview.
- Relay the applicant has been successful with their application.
- The scammer then asks the applicant to deposit a cheque into the applicant's bank account "to settle invoices relating to specific supplies required for the job opportunity".
- The scammer then asks the applicant to make a series of bank transfers to a number of different accounts according to the scammer's instructions.

Upon following the aforementioned instructions, the applicant discovers the cheque is fraudulent and all payments that have been made by the applicant have been done with the applicant's own funds. The funds are unrecoverable.

The company will have more to say on the matter upon clarification from the IC3 division at the FBI.
